A Note From The Executive Board

Delegates are requested to go through the document thoroughly to acquaint themselves with the format and procedure for the same. There is NO limit to the number of documentations that the Executive Board will review. Moreover, there is NO restriction on the length of a document. However, the documentations can only influence the flow of the committee after the executive board has approved of it.

Delegates should pay close attention to the specific technicalities and formatting requirements outlined by the Executive Board. While the volume and length of submissions are unrestricted, the quality and relevance of the documentation remain paramount. The Executive Board encourages delegates to submit comprehensive papers that address the nuances of the agenda, provided they adhere to the procedural standards. Approval by the Executive Board is a mandatory prerequisite for any document to be formally recognized and introduced into the committee's proceedings.

Furthermore, delegates should be aware that all paperwork during committee hours must be completed manually using pen and paper. Digital writing and online submissions are restricted to the period following the conclusion of the day's committee sessions.

God Bless America!

CHAPTER II - PAPERWORK INSTRUCTIONS

1. Position Paper: Position papers allow the members to present their portfolios' opinions and ideologies about the subject under discussion. Keep in mind the following while preparing your position paper:

1. An ideal position paper starts with a brief introduction to the subject in your own words, and how you think the history of your portfolio is with reference to the same (usually covered in the first paragraph).
2. As you proceed, elucidate on the stance you will take in committee, according to your portfolio, and the goals and aims you wish to achieve through committee.
3. Bring out the awes and lacunas in the legal framework and establish the problems present.
4. Delegates to please note, the Executive Board highly looks upon mentioning the crisis arcs and plans of action you wish to implement in the committee in your position paper. Thereafter, bring out the policies and reforms you wish to introduce on the same.
5. Make sure your solutions are well thought of and make sense, considering the political, economic and social environment of the country. Note that your solutions are a crucial part of your paper and cannot be omitted. They, in addition to your stance, form the foundation for the subsequent action that you wish to take in committee.
6. Feel free to criticise any actions of the government or public body. Keep it short and crisp. The ideal length for a position paper is 1.5-2 pages, not including citations and the bibliography.
7. Avoid beating around the bush and keep the arguments to the point. We would encourage underlining or highlighting the keywords.
8. Do not forget to include citations and a bibliography. Citing the sources utilised is important. Note that your citations are not included in the word limit (including both in-text and MLA citations).

9. Proofread your position paper before you submit it to avoid any grammatical errors and ambiguity.
10. Delegates are strictly advised to refrain from utilizing Artificial Intelligence in the drafting of their position papers. Any submission containing an AI-generated content threshold exceeding 3% shall be viewed unfavorably by the Executive Board and may result in a reduction of the final assessment score.

Position Papers Should:

- 1) Include the name of the delegate, his/her portfolio, the committee name and the school name.
- 2) Be in a standard font (EB Garamond/Times New Roman) with 12 point font size.
- 3) Be in PDF format; otherwise, the submission will not be considered.
- 4) Include citations and a bibliography, in any format, giving due credit to the sources used for research (not included in the 1.5-2 page limit)
- 5) The deadline for the submission of the position paper is established as Apr 18, 2026 at 11:59 PM. All submissions must be transmitted via email to the following address: ussenate2026.smun@gmail.com

2. Communique (Private/Public):

A communiqué serves as a formal correspondence dispatched by a delegate to any individual/organisation outside committee. Such communications are categorized as either private or public, with the additional provision for "Joint" communiqués executed in coordination with fellow delegates. Private communiqués remain confidential and are not disclosed to the general committee; these must be submitted as a formal note to the Chair. All such notes must be prefaced with the term

"communiqué" and specify their classification as either Private or Public.

Delegates should observe that the mere submission of a communiqué to the directors does not constitute formal approval; the Chair maintains absolute discretion to sanction or decline the proposal based on its appropriateness and relevance to the committee's trajectory. These instruments may be employed to enhance a delegate's social, economic, or political influence, or to strategically disadvantage opposing parties within the proceedings. Communiqués regarding matters devoid of relevance to the committee's official business are deemed unnecessary and should not be submitted.

TO NOTE: The effects of a private communicate will only occur if it has been passed by the Executive Board.

3. Subpoena:

A subpoena is a joint public communique that is used to file a subpoena on behalf of the demands of the Senate. Given the extraordinary nature of the Senate session, the overseeing and approval of a subpoena by different Senatorial committees has been scrapped in accordance with the power to exercise configurations within official procedures during an emergency Senatorial session. A subpoena can be primarily used for either summoning a witness before the gathering of the Senate or to demand certain documents/files from various organisations/companies/ministries/individuals relevant to an important agenda given that a legitimate legislative purpose has been stated. Subpoenas can be issued to summon a witness who is external to the senatorial session; however, only after the approval of the presiding chair. A subpoena must always be signed and consented to by a minimum of 3 senators and must first be submitted to the presiding Chair, after whose approval, it must gain the votes of half of the total number of senators present during the session. Approval and adding of modifications to the draft of the subpoena rests in the hands of the Chair. The details of the order need not be revealed to the entire committee, but first must be approved by the presiding Chair, which will then put it in motion for voting. All details of this subpoena need to be made public before it is submitted to the presiding officer.

5. Directives: In the Specialised committee of Sanskriti Model United Nations, Directives are used as crisis arc paperworks which serve the purpose of responding to a crisis that has been introduced during committee. They are precise and quick action paperworks which determine the flow of committee and also its dynamics following a crisis. The response prescribed in a Directive following a crisis can be used by a Senator as means to shift favour towards themselves or their caucus during times of immense pressure in committee. A directive may be filed by an individual Senator and be known as a Personal Directive or it may be filed by a caucus of Senators for the sake of responding to a crisis arc. Please do note, the decision of approving a Directive and implementing it in committee rests solely in the hands of the Executive Board and all directives need not necessarily be approved and implemented. Given below is the sample format of drafting a directive for approval

CHAPTER III - PROCEDURE GUIDE

Subtopics:

- A. Formal Debate
 - B. Informal Debate
 - C. Motions
 - D. Yields
 - E. Points

A. Formal Debate:

- 1. Opening Statements: An Opening Statement constitutes a formal address delivered to the committee by a designated representative from each political caucus. This statement functions as the official declaration of a party's policy. The Executive Board shall select one representative from each caucus to present their respective party's legislative baseline.
- 2. General Speakers List(GSL): Within the General Speakers List (GSL), each delegate is allocated a default speaking time of 90 seconds or 60 seconds. However, the committee reserves the right to amend this duration should it be deemed necessary. In instances where a delegate concludes their address prior to the expiration of the allotted time, they are formally required to yield the remaining balance, the procedure for which is detailed subsequently. The GSL does not mandate a specific topic, thereby permitting delegates to address any matters they deem pertinent, including but not limited to introducing the agenda, articulating their respective positions, and identifying critical issues. As an inexhaustible list, the GSL shall remain open for the duration of the conference.
- 3. Senatorial Hearings: Senatorial Hearings constitute formal proceedings within the United States Senate during which Senators, upon recognition by the Presiding Officer, may direct interrogatories to summoned witnesses. While the Chair maintains the prerogative to establish the quantity of questions permitted, each recognized interlocutor is mandated to pose at least one inquiry pertinent to the established agenda. Such sessions are generally convened at the discretion of the Chair to address matters of an urgent or specialized nature. Furthermore, a Senator may introduce a motion to summon a member of the extraordinary session; however, such an action necessitates a unanimous vote and the submission of a subpoena outlining the session's legal basis, justification, and proposed witness list. The Chair reserves absolute discretion regarding the approval of such motions and the final composition of the witness list. Participation in these inquiries is strictly limited to individuals within the extraordinary session, and the summoning of external parties is prohibited.

- 4. Formal Consideration (PSL's): Formal Consideration constitutes a procedural mechanism whereby members of the Senate may formally petition for the deliberation of a specific thematic agenda through a formalized and recorded debate. Upon recognition by the Presiding Officer and subsequent adoption by a committee vote, the floor shall be yielded to recognized speakers. While these proceedings are strictly deliberative and devoid of statutory authority, it is incumbent upon the participants to formulate recommended actions or substantive solutions to ensure the efficacy and productive nature of the debate.
- 5. Legislative Bills: A Legislative Bill constitutes a formal proposal within the Senate, specifically designed to offer solution-oriented measures regarding a designated topic. Any Senator maintains the prerogative to propose such a bill, which, upon recognition by the Presiding Officer, shall be subjected to a committee vote to determine its eligibility for deliberation. These bills represent direct policy initiatives supported by a caucus of delegates; furthermore, the Chair reserves the absolute discretion to incorporate amendments as deemed necessary. It is mandatory that all bills proposed by a specific caucus be consolidated into a comprehensive Working Paper, which shall undergo a final vote to decide if it is worthy of being a part of the Draft Resolution.

B. Informal Debate:

- 1. Resolutions(Moderated Caucus): Resolutions constitute a fundamental component of Senatorial proceedings, serving as a primary mechanism for delegates to facilitate and structure substantive debate. Through these instruments, delegates are empowered to deliberate upon specific thematic subtopics of the agenda within a designated timeframe. Furthermore, resolutions are formally utilized to express institutional concern regarding specific issues and to contemplate non-legislative-binding measures that may subsequently be integrated as substantive solutions within the Senate's definitive Draft Resolution. It is further stipulated that resolutions may be introduced to facilitate the deliberation of proposed legislative amendments or the modification of extant statutes, provided such motions maintain continuous relevance to the proceedings.
- 2. Senatorial Consultations(Unmoderated Caucus): Senatorial Consultations are informal proceedings that take place in the Senate amongst Senators to facilitate negotiations and gain a consensus on future committee proceedings, which would be desirable for the fruitful continuation of debate. This can be introduced for a certain time period by the Chair of the Senate or can be proposed as a motion by a Senator, which would then be voted on. It is highly crucial to determine the path of the committee in general and structured debate in particular.

C. Motions of the Senate:

- 1. Motion to Open Debate: This motion is raised to commence debate in the Senate. It is raised at the beginning of the first senatorial session on the first day of the conference. How to raise the motion: “Senator Barack Obama of the Democratic Party would like to raise a motion to open debate.”
- 2. Motion to introduce a Working Paper/Draft Resolution: This motion is raised to introduce documentation to the committee, which is a prerequisite for the document to be discussed. The name of the draft resolution or working paper is to be specified while introducing the document to the committee. How to raise the motion: “Senator John McCain of the Republican Party would like to raise a motion to introduce Draft Resolution 1.0 to committee”

3. Motion to discuss a Working Paper/Draft Resolution: This motion is used to discuss a Working Paper or Draft Resolution. Delegates may point out loopholes, suggest modifications, and bring up features they feel are relevant while discussing a document to make it more comprehensive, elective, and implementable. The authors for a working paper and the sponsors for a draft resolution are answerable to the committee regarding the content of their documentation. When raising this motion, the delegates are required to mention how they want the documentation to be discussed. Documentation is primarily discussed via the following methods:

4. Motion to Close Debate, Move into Voting Procedure for Draft Resolution: This motion is raised to move into the voting procedure for a draft resolution. A draft resolution requires a special majority comprising 2/3rds of the committee strength in order to pass. Once a draft resolution passes, it is adopted and is considered the final document of the committee representing the conclusion it has come to. It is important to note that once a draft resolution passes, voting will not be conducted for any other resolutions. The voting for a resolution is done through a roll call vote. In a roll call vote, the Executive Board calls out the names of the countries/portfolios present in the committee in alphabetical order and the delegates may respond with yes, no, abstain, yes with rights, or no with rights.

(i) Delegates may respond with a yay to vote in favour of the draft resolution (or Final Act, in this case),

(ii) Delegates may respond with a no to vote against the draft resolution,

(iii) Delegates may respond with an abstain if they wish to neither vote in favour of nor vote against the resolution. However, delegates can only abstain if they responded with 'Present' during their roll call

(iv) Delegates may respond with yes/no with rights when they vote in favour of or against a resolution and wish to give reasons for the same. They are then given a 30 seconds comment after voting for all delegates is complete.

How to raise the motion: "Senator Dick Durbin from the Democratic Party would like to raise a motion to move into voting procedure for Draft Resolution 1.0 through a roll call vote"

5. Motion to Enter GSL: This motion is raised when a delegate would like to open the General Speakers List, and hence commence formal debate. The total time need not be specified, as the GSL is inexhaustible and is reverted to in case all motions fail to pass in committee. How to raise the motion: “Senator John McCain of the Republican Party would like to raise a motion to enter formal debate and open the General Speakers’ List”

6. Motion to Move Into A Resolution Session(Moderated

Caucus): This motion is used when the committee wants to discuss specific subtopics of the agenda. While raising this motion, the topic, total time, and the individual speaker’s time must be mentioned. It is important to note that the total time of a resolution must be divisible by the per-speaker time to incorporate a whole number of speakers before the resolution time elapses. The maximum total time it can be raised for is 20 minutes. How to raise the motion: “Senator Joe Biden of the Democratic Party would like to raise a motion for a resolution on the topic ‘XYZ’ for a total time being 15 minutes and the individual speaker’s time being 60 seconds”

7. Motion to Move Into A Senatorial Consultation

Session(Unmoderated Caucus): During the first few senatorial sessions, Senatorial Consultations are used to build blocs, converse with other senators, and discuss potential resolution topics, bill ideas, formal considerations, and crisis considerations while in the last few senatorial sessions, they are primarily used for completing documentation. Just like resolutions, the maximum time a senatorial consultation can be raised for is 20 minutes. However, senatorial consultations do not have a topic or an individual speaker’s time. How to raise the motion: “Senator Harry Reid of the Democratic Party would like to raise a motion for an unmoderated caucus for the total time of 10 minutes”.

8. Motion for Extension: This motion is used to extend a moderated or unmoderated caucus. It must be kept in mind that they can only be extended by half of the original time they were raised for. If a Senatorial Consultation was originally raised for 10 minutes, then for an extension, the motion would be raised by stating: “Senator Joe Biden of the Democratic Party would like to raise a motion to extend the unmoderated caucus by a total time of 5 minutes”.

9. Motion to move into Formal Considerations (PSL): The motion to move into Formal Considerations is generally used when the committee wants to discuss documentation or to streamline the debate of the committee. Whilst raising this motion, delegates need to specify the topic, the total time, and the individual speaker's time. How to raise the motion: "Senator Joe Biden of the Democratic Party would like to raise a motion to move into a Formal Consideration on the topic 'ABC' for the total time being 10 minutes, and the individual speaker's time being 60 seconds.

10. Motion to Adjourn : This motion is raised on the last day of the conference to conclude committee proceedings. How to raise the motion: "Senator Barack Obama of the Democratic Party would like to raise the motion to adjourn the committee."

D. Yields:

1. Yield to the Chair: When a delegate yields to the Chair, their remaining time is dissolved with the committee time.

2. Yield to Points of Information (POIs): When a delegate yields to points of information, other delegates may ask them questions based on their speech. The number of POIs recognised by the chair will depend on the time remaining from the speech.

3. Yield to Another Delegate: When a delegate yields their time to another delegate, the delegate to whom the remaining time is yielded may comment on the original speech given or further build up on it. Delegates are to confer with each other and obtain prior permission before yielding their time to another delegate.

4. Yield to Comments: When a delegate yields to comments, speakers are recognised to make comments regarding the speech for the remaining time.

Delegates are to note that they are not required to yield their time in informal methods of debate.

E. Points:

- 1. Points of Personal Privilege: This point is raised when a delegate experiences personal discomfort or inconvenience that hinders their ability to participate in the committee. For example, this point can be used if the delegate wants the Executive board or a fellow delegate to repeat anything. This is the only point that delegates can raise while another delegate has the floor in committee.
- 2. Point of Parliamentary Inquiry: This point is raised when a delegate needs clarification or has a question about committee procedure. For example, this point can be used if a delegate requires clarification regarding yields.
- 3. Point of Information: This point is raised when a delegate wishes to ask another delegate a question after they complete their speech or at any point in the committee. However, verbal Points of Information will only be entertained during formal debate if the delegate yields to POIs. If a delegate wishes to ask a POI after a moderated caucus speech, they may do so through a chit via the Executive Board.
- 4. Point of Order: A Point of Order is utilized when a procedural error has been made by the Executive Board or when a delegate identifies a factual or formal discrepancy in the speech or documentation of another participant.
- 5. Right to Reply: A Right to Reply may be invoked by a delegate to provide a formal response or clarification in instances where they perceive their personal integrity or reputation has been impugned by allegations or derogatory remarks from another committee member. Upon the granting of such a request by the Executive Board, the delegate shall be permitted to address the chamber immediately, superseding the established order of the speakers' list.

CHAPTER IV - FINAL DOCUMENTATION

1. Working Paper/Bills: In the Specialised Committee of Sanskriti Model United Nations, a working paper serves as the foundational draft from which legislation emerges.

Given the extraordinary circumstances of this agenda, the standard working paper process has been modified to reflect the urgency and legislative nature of the session.

On Day 2, each political caucus, Democratic and Republican, will be required to present one bill to the committee. These bills must directly address the crises before this chamber and must propose concrete, actionable legislative solutions. Each caucus will formally present their bill to the full committee, after which the floor opens for deliberation, cross-examination, and refinement of the proposed legislation. Both bills will then be put to a vote.

A bill that secures a two-thirds majority of the committee passes to the Executive Board for review. The Executive Board retains full veto authority and may strike any bill it deems procedurally deficient, factually unsound, or incompatible with the simulation's framework. A vetoed bill is removed from consideration entirely. A bill that passes Executive Board review is incorporated into the Draft Resolution.

A bill that fails to secure the two-thirds threshold does not advance and is dropped from the floor. The two independents, Senator Sanders and Senator Lieberman, are not bound to either caucus's bill and may choose to co-sponsor, oppose, or remain neutral on either piece of legislation. Their votes, however, count toward the two-thirds threshold and both caucuses would be wise to secure them early.

2. Draft Resolution:

The Draft Resolution is the final legislative product of this Extraordinary Session and the sole measure by which the success or failure of this chamber will be judged. An Emergency Session of the United States Senate that produces no legislation has not responded to a crisis. It has documented one. The Executive Board expects this chamber to produce a Draft Resolution. That is not a suggestion.

Given the extraordinary nature of this session, traditional Senatorial Omni Bill procedure has been suspended for the duration of these proceedings in accordance with the procedural modifications outlined earlier in this guide. In its place, standard Draft Resolution procedure governs the final legislative output of this chamber.

The three days of floor debate, witness testimony, bill presentation, and amendment deliberation are all directed toward a single legislative endpoint: a Draft Resolution that represents this chamber's formal, collective response to the financial crisis and the broader fiscal emergency before it. A Draft Resolution that passes this chamber becomes the session's binding legislative output. One that does not leaves the question of what the United States Senate did when the economy was in freefall with an answer nobody in this room should be comfortable with.

Structure

A Draft Resolution consists of two distinct components: preambulatory clauses and operative clauses.

Preambulatory clauses establish the legal, historical, and factual basis for the resolution's actions. They acknowledge the conditions that necessitate legislative intervention, reference prior congressional and executive action where relevant, and articulate the principles underpinning the operative measures that follow. Each preambulatory clause opens with an italicised present participle, known as a preambulatory phrase, and closes with a comma. Preambulatory clauses do not prescribe action. They establish the grounds on which action is being taken.

Operative clauses are the resolution's legislative substance. They set out the specific actions, mandates, frameworks, and directives this chamber is formally adopting in response to the crisis. Each operative clause is numbered, opens with an operative phrase, and closes with a semicolon. The final operative clause closes with a period. Each operative clause contains a single legislative idea or proposal. Delegates attempting to compress multiple distinct policy actions into a single operative clause will find that those clauses invite unfriendly amendments and lose votes on the floor.

Amendments

Once a Draft Resolution has been submitted to the presiding officer, delegates may introduce amendments to modify its content. A friendly amendment is one accepted by the resolution's sponsors and requires no floor vote. An unfriendly amendment is one the sponsors oppose and must be put to a floor vote, passing by simple majority. Amendments must target specific clauses and must be submitted in writing to the presiding officer before being moved on the floor.

Standards

A Draft Resolution produced by this chamber must meet three standards without exception. It must be legally grounded in the constitutional and statutory authorities available to the United States Senate as outlined in this guide. It must be legislatively coherent, meaning its operative clauses must propose actions this chamber actually has the authority to mandate rather than actions that belong to the executive branch, the Federal Reserve, or the private sector. And it must be substantively responsive to the crisis at hand, addressing both the immediate financial emergency and the structural conditions that produced it with the seriousness the moment demands.

A resolution full of aspirational language and vague directives is not legislation. It is a press release. This chamber is capable of better and the Executive Board will hold it to that standard.
