Paperwork

How Paperwork is marked, passed, and scrapped

Any paperwork written by the delegates should be sent to the Executive Board (EB) via the Logistical Members (Logis). After the EB has checked and marked your paperwork, it will be returned to you with any of the following three notes:

1. Passed — This means your paperwork has been marked by the EB, and you can continue with the intended crisis arc. The paperwork may or may not be included in a crisis update.
2. Marked — This means your paperwork has been marked by the EB. However, we encourage you to take up a different crisis arc. This paperwork will not be included in any future crisis updates.
3. Scrapped/No Note — This paperwork has not been marked by the EB or has been given negative marks; we recommend you look for an entirely different perspective. It will not be included in any crisis updates. If any of your paperwork has been scrapped, please ask us for specific feedback about it at the end of the day.

The above details hold true for all forms of paperwork except for committee-wide directives, draft resolutions, and action orders (action order formats and requirements will be explained during the committee).

Communiqués

A communiqué is a piece of documentation that delegates send to a specific recipient in order to inform them of an event, urge them to prepare for some action, or extract information from them. Communiqués are generally written to non-state actors, as it is assumed that the delegate has access to all government information during normal situations. Communiqués do not need to be extremely detailed, but should be able to persuade the recipient of the delegate's intended goal and should be easily understandable out of the committee context; details of non-public committee discussions and actions may be provided in the communiqué.

A sample communiqué is attached below for your reference:

INDIVIDUAL PRIVATE COMMUNIQUE

From: Representative of the Mexican Government

To: Joaquin Guzman

Dear Joaquin Guzman,

I hope this letter finds you well. It's been a while since we last spoke, and I hope things have been going as smoothly as possible on your end. I'm writing to discuss something that could be quite beneficial for both of us, considering the recent developments in Turkey. First of all, while publicly we have to take a tough stance against cartel activities due to international pressures, you and I both understand the real dynamics at play here. You know as well as I do that sometimes the public face we present isn't the whole story. Behind the scenes, there's room for cooperation. We've got a proposal that I believe you'll find interesting and advantageous. We're looking at a discreet partnership, one that remains completely on the record and out of the spotlight. Our intel shows increased terrorist activities around Turkey. If you could provide us with Intel and logistical access to troops sponsored by you. We would, in return, relax some of the border security measures as well as confiscatory measures we had to take because of international pressure, in areas like Sonora and Chihuahua. This will allow your operations to proceed with fewer interruptions. Think about our past collaborations, which I need not reiterate, where we managed to achieve our goals with minimal interference. There's no reason we can't replicate that success now.

Moreover, we recognize the valuable connections you have with certain terror groups. At some point, we would like to explore utilizing these resources as well, but only in a controlled manner that benefits both of us without drawing unnecessary attention. Our network is extensive, and with our strategic input, we can leverage it for mutual gain. We should also set up a secure line of communication, maybe through a trusted intermediary. This way, we can exchange information and coordinate our actions without risking exposure. Quick, reliable communication will be key to making this work. This partnership offers significant benefits for both sides. For you, it means less disruption and enhanced security for your operations. For us, it means a more stable environment and a stronger stance against these extremist threats. Plus, it'll help keep international scrutiny at bay. I know you see the potential here. We're not enemies; we're partners who can achieve more by working together. Your leadership has brought your organization to where it is today, and with our combined efforts, we can navigate these challenges more effectively. Take some time to think about this. I'm confident you'll see the value in this partnership. Let's arrange a meeting soon to discuss this in more detail and figure out the best way forward. Together, we can turn these threats into opportunities. Looking forward to your thoughts.

Warm regards,

Government of the United Mexican States

Directives

Directives are used to take action. They are written documents meant to solve, prevent, or undertake action with respect to a certain issue. It is generally expected that a directive is preceded by a communique, this is in order to ensure that the person(s) you are writing the directive to are willing and able to achieve the desired result or carry out the desired action. Directives must be titled, and are either covert (known to the recipient(s) and sender(s) only) or overt (may be read out in committee at the EB's discretion). When writing a directive that calls for some action, delegates should also note a means to attain or transport the resources for that action; this may also be mentioned in a prior communique. The more specific each clause is, the more likely the action will be carried out as intended, and it will also be marked more favourably. The three major types of directives are as follows:

1. Personal/Individual — These are written by only one delegate. They may be covert or overt.
2. Joint Directives — These are written by two or more delegates in order to carry out a specific action. They may be covert or overt. It is also possible that these can be written by all the delegates of the committee to take some action outside of the scope of the UNSC and not be binding on any other nations; again, this action may be covert or overt.
3. Committee-Wide Directives — This type of directive is written by the committee as a whole. It is very similar in functioning to a Draft Resolution in its scope and enforcement; however, it does not require preambulatory clauses. It must be passed by a unanimous vote of the committee and will not be subject to any voting, amendment, discussion, or removal procedures after it has been submitted to the Executive Board. This type of directive, generally written in response to some major event, will be expected by the EB at least once or twice each day. This has no authors.

Please find below a sample personal covert directive for your reference:

Personal Covert Directive: “Mission Temujin”

From: The Delegate of the United States of America

To: Ronald Reagan (U.S. President), William J. Casey (Director of CIA), Duane R. “Dewey” Clarridge (Head of CIA Directorate of Operations), Rear Admiral Thomas A. Brooks (Head of U.S. Naval Intelligence Command), William Eldrige Odom (Head of NSA)

Summary

Mission Temujin is a secret U.S. operation to find out who is behind a dangerous group called the C3* Cluster, linked to a figure named “Temujin.” The goal is to track their leaders, movements, money, and connections to weapons, a submarine, and a possible virus threat. Intelligence agencies are collecting clues from signals, spies, satellites, and financial records. No attacks are permitted without high-level approval, and all findings are kept strictly confidential and disseminated using completely confidential means of communication.

1. Background and Authorisation

- a. Authorization: Intel under existing Executive Orders, specifically EO 12333; Counterintelligence under title 50 and title 28 of the U.S. code; Maritime Domain Awareness authorities for maritime surveillance
- b. Caveats: Compartmentalize at “TS//SCI//ORCON//TEMUJIN. No unilateral kinetic actions shall be authorized under this order. Any operational action requires the NSC Deputy’s approval.

2. Essential Elements of Information (EEIs)

- a. Identification: Acquire legal name, DOB, nationality, biometrics, service record, aliases, handles.
- b. Current locations: Acquire details of safehouses, travel nodes, couriers, and comm hubs
- c. C3* Cluster Composition: list all members by identity and role, identify recruitment channels
- d. Operation Links:
 - i. Submarine: gain the full boarding list, details of surviving crew, chain of custody, people(s) with control of systems, and nuclear codes
 - ii. Lashkar-e-Khilaafah: examine points, funding sources, supply lines, propaganda cells, training, and recruitment lines
 - iii. Marburg Virus: create a list of those with access to laboratories, biostorage, and production test lines
 - iv. Past aliases: identify GRU, KGB, KHAD remnants, party members, Spetsnaz retirees/active personnel
- e. Finance: Map donor locations and identities, decipher gold/cash/in-kind transfers and holdings related to Temujin

3. Lines of Effort (LoEs)

- a. LoE 1 - SIGINT/CYBER - Lead: DIRNSA
 - i. Compile a multilingual set with keywords for “Temujin” variations, “Crimson Dawn”, “C3* Cluster”, “Oceanic King, and related terms.
 - ii. Add receivers for HF/VHF/UHF radio bands targeting ex-Soviet networks and SATCOMs; identify burst transmissions and numbers-station formats.
 - iii. Focus on the Caspian coastal areas, the Caucasus, the Volga corridor, Kazakhstan, Buryatia, Tuva, and key naval nodes.

- iv. Analyze RF fingerprints, correlating transmission source networks, time difference of arrival methods, ciphers, and steganography.
- v. Access soft targets like port telegram systems used for shipping schedules, agent mail shipping nodes, and embassy data logs for routing the information of the message, not the actual contents.
- vi. Product: Daily updates on intel received, if significant
- b. LoE 2 - HUMINT - Lead: CIA
 - i. Identify and make contact with ex-Soviet naval or special forces members who also have Central Asian backgrounds (Temujin was an old name for Genghis Khan)
 - ii. Establish relations with various arms dealers, maintenance contractors, and transportation corporations to identify unusual cargoes.
 - iii. Contact nationalist or religious groups to understand clues and opportunities behind “Temujin” and “C3* Clusters.”
 - iv. Capture and interrogate Lashkar-e-Khilaafa members to identify links to “Temujin”, within or outside the group’s ideological network.
 - v. Mask the operation with verifiable businesses as covers, mapping out safehouses, covert meeting areas, and channel lines without raising suspicion.
 - vi. Product: Compiled report of all reliable leads, linked to match SIGINT findings, report to be produced within 4 days

4. Counterintelligence

- a. Meant to prevent the deception of reconnaissance by the identification of forged signals and documentation that may mislead the project
- b. Monitor broadcast channels for forged poems using already available intelligence.
- c. Audit allied nodes for C3* sympathisers and root them out for interrogation and intel gathering
- d. Product: CI memo to be received by Day 6, along with immediate daily alerts and progress reports

Press Releases

A press release is a document used by a nation to announce something to the international community or the press. A country may, generally, decide to send a press release in response to a crisis update, a statement, an action affecting their country, or an action by an official of their country. Press releases can be passed by a single nation, a group of nations, or by the committee as a whole. A press release’s contents may also be attached to a directive; such a directive will be entirely overt irrespective of the type of directive it is labeled as.

Presidential Statements

These are statements given by the leader of your nation. In very specific situations, they may also be given by members within the nation's government who are affected or involved in the concerned incident. This is the only form of paperwork that may use personal pronouns (ie, I, me, etc.). Any delegate can author Presidential Statements. Unless in specific situations with conflicting governmental roles, such statements are generally considered to be representative of the entire nation's sentiments, goals, or beliefs.

Draft Resolutions

The three days of debate are ultimately directed towards reaching a consensus and forming a resolution, known as the Draft Resolution (DR), that sets out how the Member States must tackle the various issues of the agenda. A good Draft Resolution requires a well-rounded approach to the agenda and must be supported with a realistic framework for implementation. Delegates must ensure that all solutions proposed during the committee or presented in the Draft Resolution fall within the purview of the mandate of the United Nations Security Council. The Preamble of a Draft Resolution states the purpose of addressing the agenda at hand and highlights past international action on the issue. Each clause begins with a present participle, called a preambulatory phrase, which is italicised, and the clause always ends with a comma. These clauses can include references to the UN charter, citations of past UN resolutions or treaties on the agenda, acknowledgement of statements made by the Secretary-General or a UN body or agency, recognition of the efforts of regional or non-governmental organisations, and general statements on the topic and its importance. Some sample preambulatory clauses include:

Affirming	Alarmed by	Approving
Bearing in mind	Believing	Confident
Contemplating	Concerned	Deeply Convinced
Deeply regretting	Desiring	Expecting
Emphasising	Fulfilling	Expressing
Having examined	Having received	Recalling

Guided by	Further recalling	Noting with deep concern
Acknowledging	Recommending	Advising
Assuring	Guiding	Understanding

Operative clauses are meant to offer solutions to issues addressed during the proceedings of the committee. These clauses are action-oriented and should include both an underlined verb at the beginning of the sentence, followed by the proposed solution. Each clause should follow the following principles.

1. Clauses must be numbered.
2. Each clause should support the others and continue to build your solution.
3. Add details to your clauses in order to have a complete solution.
4. Operative clauses must be punctuated by a semicolon, with the exception of the last operative clause, which should end with a period.

Some sample operative phrases are:

Accepts	Affirms	Considers
Draws attention to	Expresses	Appreciates
Reminds	Further reminds	Recommends
Invites	Suggests	Requests
Proclaims	Allows	Reaffirms
Strongly suggests	Welcomes	Stresses
Urges	Notes	Strongly regrets

Position Paper

Purpose

The position paper is a formal written statement of your country's policy on the agenda being discussed in the UNSC. It reflects your delegation's research, understanding, and strategic interests. This should be a well-structured presentation of your country's view, evidence-based, and diplomatically articulated. It is important to note that, unconventionally, during this futuristic committee, only the timeline and overt solutions are to be considered publicly available (to the media and the general public), while the rest of the position paper will only be accessible by the EB and the delegates.

General Approach

Delegates should produce a well-researched paper reflecting the foreign policy, international alignments, and national interests of the country they represent. This should not be an opinion paper, but an official policy statement substantiated with reasoning and appropriate facts. The writing must also be formal, accurate, and objective. Every argument should logically connect to your country's real-world motivations and dependencies.

Tone and Style

Formal academic language should be used throughout the paper. Personal pronouns, such as "I" or "we", are not used; instead, refer to your delegation as "The Republic of," "The Government of," or "The Delegation of." Be diplomatically courteous even in the most firm or critical statements. Aggressive or bold statements are encouraged, so long as they are supported by rational justification and sound political logic. Writing should reflect confidence, realism, and awareness of international dynamics.

Structure

For this futuristic committee, the position paper should be written in the following general format:

- 1. Timeline and background: Any information, advancements, discoveries, or actions that the delegate believes their country may have or should have taken in the past may be written in this section. It is to be written in the same format as the timeline provided in the background guide, or, if the delegate wishes, it may be written in a region-wise or incident-wise format.
- 2. Perspective on the Agenda: Since the UNSC generally does not convene on any one specific agenda, this section must not only address the nation's stance on the situation in the Arctic, but must also address any ongoing conflicts or incidents throughout the world that may come under the purview of the UNSC.

3. Foreign Policy: Foreign policy, though largely consistent, is subject to change. This section should clearly define the nation's stance on various pertinent issues and on other nations and blocs. The foreign policy should not be absolutely different from the nation's foreign policy as of the freeze date (January 2026) and should draw from the timelines in both the background guide and position paper.
4. Solutions: This section should be structured in a point-wise format wherein the nation provides specific and achievable solutions to the current world situation. These solutions may be divided into two sections:
 - a. Overt: This would address solutions that the committee as a whole can address. It may or may not be revealed to the committee, and delegates should assume it is publicly available (this will be the only non-covert part of the delegates' position paper).
 - b. Covert: This should include solutions that may or may not be beneficial to the rest of the world, but that seek to achieve specific national goals. They may be bold, manipulative, and may even require international law to be violated.
5. Bibliography/ Works Cited (Note: footnotes and endnotes should not be used)

Sample Position Paper

Given below is a link to a PDF of a sample draft resolution for your reference:

 USA-Position Paper.pdf

Length and Formatting

The position paper is to be written in EB Garamond font with font size 12. It should span 6-12 pages and should be written in MLA 8th edition. The bibliography section will not count towards the word count. The position paper is to be submitted in PDF format only and will not be marked if submitted in any other format. Photos, watermarks, and flags may be used in the position paper. Headers are permitted, while footers may only be used for numbering. All position papers should be emailed to unsc2026.smun@gmail.com by 16th April, 2026, at 11:59 pm.

It is important to note that if a position paper is not submitted by the deadline provided in PDF format to the Executive Board, the delegate may be marked ineligible for receiving awards at the discretion of the Sanskriti Model United Nations Secretariat.

Procedure

Roll Call

Delegates may vote “present” or “present and voting”. Delegates voting “present and voting” must vote either for or against any resolution; they may not abstain. Voting “present and voting”, however, shows a nation’s dedication to reaching a resolution in the committee. A delegate voting “present” may vote for, against, or abstain from voting on a resolution. Observer nations may only vote “present” as they may not vote on draft resolutions.

Points

Points are instrumental during the committee, and each delegate must know when and how to use each. Points are addressed according to a specific hierarchy, with the first point listed below being the most important and the last the least. The types of points and their uses in committee are detailed below:

- 1. Point of Personal Privilege: To indicate their need to raise a point of personal privilege, a delegate may hold their placard vertically. This point is extremely powerful and is given preference over all other activities in committee (it may even disrupt a speech). It is to be used by delegates only if they are feeling discomfort in the committee or are unable to hear a delegate's speech. If a point of personal privilege is recognised by the Executive Board, the delegate may choose to address it privately with the Executive Board by approaching the dais. Misuse of this point may result in the delegate being debarred from the committee.
- 2. Point of Parliamentary Inquiry: These are questions by the delegates asked of the Executive Board about the functioning and procedure of the committee.
- 3. Point of Order: This point is used by delegates to note any errors made by the Executive Board in following proper committee procedure. Unconventionally, during this committee, we will also be accepting points of order after speeches in order to note any legal loopholes or inaccuracies within the speech (when used in such a way, the delegate may be asked to provide a source or name the specific law that is not considered).

4. Points of Information (POI): This includes questions asked to a delegate after their speech has ended. They may only be asked if a delegate speaking yields to POIs, and the Executive Board recognizes the delegate wishing to ask a POI. POIs cannot be statements and should not include personal pronouns; they must be short and well-articulated questions.

Yields

After a speech, a delegate may choose to yield their time in a specific way:

1. Yield to another delegate: This yield is meant to allocate the remaining time in a delegate's speech to another delegate in committee. The delegate to whom time has been yielded must speak right after the delegate's speech has elapsed.
2. Yield to comments: This allows other delegates, as recognized by the EB, to comment on the delegate's speech.
3. Yield to POIs: This allows the delegate to be asked questions by other delegates; these questions may or may not be concerned with the speech made (though it is highly recommended that they are).
4. Yield to the Chair: This allows the remaining time in your speech to be absorbed into general committee time and used to continue the procedure.

Motions

"The delegate of _____ would like to raise a motion to/for _____."

The motions that can be raised are:

1. Motion to open debate
2. Motion to establish the General Speaker's List (GSL)
 - a. Once established, a GSL does not end until the committee is adjourned. If no other motion passes, the committee automatically reverts to the GSL.
 - b. At any given time, a GSL may have no next speakers
 - c. The GSL is generally 90 seconds long and is used by delegates to address their foreign policy or stance on the agenda, although this is not mandatory, and the GSL may be used to discuss any topic.
 - d. There is no limit to the number of times a delegate may speak in a GSL; however, the EB will favour those who haven't spoken even once.
3. Motion to establish a Provisional Speaker's List (PSL)

- a. Format: “ The Delegate of _____ would like to raise a motion to enter a Provisional Speaker’s List on the topic of _____, total time being _____ and individual/per speaker time being _____ ”.
- b. A provisional speaker’s list is identical to a moderated caucus; however, it allows for yields.
- c. A simple majority is required to pass this motion.

4. Motion for a Moderated Caucus

- a. Format: “ The Delegate of _____ would like to raise a motion for a Moderated Caucus on the topic of _____, total time being _____ and individual/per speaker time being _____ ”.
- b. These are used to address a specific topic or subtopic within the committee.
- c. No yields are allowed after a moderated caucus.
- d. A simple majority is required to pass this motion.

5. Motion for an Unmoderated Caucus

- a. These are used in committees to suspend formal sessions for a specific amount of time.
- b. They are generally used to enter an informal session during which delegates may lobby, write paperwork, or discuss solutions. Although unmoderated caucuses are a form of informal committee session, delegates are expected to maintain the same level of discipline and sincerity as during formal debate.
- c. A simple majority is required to pass this motion.

6. Motion for a Round Robin

- a. All delegates in the committee are required to speak for a specific amount of time.
- b. The order in which delegates are recognized to be chosen to speak is up to the discretion of the EB.
- c. No yields are allowed.
- d. A simple majority is required to pass this motion.

7. Motion to Table the Draft Resolution

- a. It is used to present a draft resolution to the committee.
- b. It involves presenting the resolution (clause by clause) and may also involve a debate (for and against) the resolution.
- c. Delegates tend to use this as a tool to delay or postpone committee proceedings and move away from the current situation. For this reason, this motion will only be entertained during the last two sessions of the committee or as per the discretion of the EB.

- d. Observer nations are required to exit the room during this motion.
- e. This motion requires a two-thirds majority to pass.

8. Motion to suspend debate and move into Voting Procedure on the Draft Resolution

- a. This motion is used to enter a voting session on the proposed draft resolutions.
- b. During this, observer nations must exit the committee room, and they are not allowed to vote on the resolution.
- c. Permanent member nations may choose to vote for, against, abstain from (if they voted present during roll call), or veto the resolution. If a resolution is vetoed by any P5 member nation, it is automatically scrapped and does not pass.
- d. Non-permanent member nations may vote for, against, or abstain from voting on (if they voted present during roll call) the motion.
- e. This motion requires a two-thirds majority to pass.

9. Motion to Suspend Committee

- a. This motion is used to halt the committee for lunch breaks, tea breaks, or at the end of the day.
- b. It requires a two-thirds majority vote. However, in this committee, it will also be passed at the discretion of the EB, but must be brought up by a delegate.

10. Motion to Adjourn Committee

- a. This motion is used to formally conclude committee proceedings at the end of the conference.
- b. It requires a two-thirds majority to pass.
